

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method of improving intensive care unit (ICU)-associated hypocalcemia in a mammal by the administration of a vitamin D compound, or other compounds exhibiting vitamin D-like activity, to the mammal for a 5 sufficient period of time to improve or restore the serum calcium levels of the mammal.